Status By Era

Pre-Empire Era: Duke/Duchess of Northern Aicruae. One of the three neutral noble families. Second-oldest house in the kingdom, founded just thirteen years after House Patton. Trusted advisors and scholars to the crown. Survived the War of World's End, rebuilt under Viason Arvento, and entered a golden age of trade, law, and cultural production.

Solis's Era: House Arvento survives the civil war between Solis and the Twins (Orcus and Iris) by remaining neutral and refusing to choose an official side. They continue to exist for thousands of years, all the way to Minara's Era.

Crandona's Era: [TBD]

Minara's Era: [TBD]

Why They Matter

House Arvento is the lie every noble family tells about itself except Arvento actually lives it. They're the scholars who write laws protecting children and the same family that fed a queen to hunting dogs. They invented hospitals and also invented a poison that crushes your blood vessels over two hours while you scream. They preach "Worthy Nobility" the idea that nobles should earn their status while operating as the undisclosed rulers of every social circle in Aicruae, quietly destroying anyone who falls out of their favor.

They call themselves neutral. They are not neutral. They are simply too powerful for anyone to force into choosing a side, and too smart to give anyone a reason to try. The royal family can't question them. The other houses can't afford to lose them. And the Arventos know it.

What makes them dangerous isn't the magical weapons or the poison or the Council of the Forsaken. It's that they've convinced the entire kingdom they're the reasonable ones the beautiful, elegant, scholarly family who just wants peace. And then you remember Daneya wearing the dead queen's blood in a necklace, and Tilan burning House Baliva off the map, and you realize: the morning wind doesn't just carry flowers. It levels buildings.

Heraldry

The Crest: Gyronny of eight vert and or (eight triangular sections radiating from center, alternating green and gold). At center, a red rose proper with golden stamen and dark green leaves, pierced by a silver sword with ornate golden hilt laid in bend sinister. In the upper dexter, a white roundel (full moon). In the upper sinister, a silver needle threaded with red. In the lower dexter, a golden chalice. In the lower sinister, a golden hunting horn.

Sybolism: The red rose pierced by a sword is the heart of House Arvento. The rose reflects their Barqeten faith, which holds that caring for oneself and others is an act of worship, while the sword cutting through it says the Arventos will destroy what they love if honor demands it. Together they are the house's oldest truth: the morning wind carries flowers and levels buildings. The full moon honors Nimlye, Goddess of Secrets and Fate. House Arvento operates the Council of the Forsaken, an underground justice organization that answers to no one but the king. They are the undisclosed rulers of Aicruae's social circles. The moon watches everything and says nothing, so do the Arventos. The needle and red thread represents the house's legacy of stitching the kingdom together through law and medicine. The Infant Laws protecting mothers and children. The Yerian Laws protecting women. The Arvento Code that became the kingdom's de facto constitution. Finshall Arvento's hospitals and medical texts. Taharry Arvento's breakthroughs in treating Night Terrors. The thread is red because Arvento care has always been inseparable from Arvento blood, they heal and they hurt with equal precision. The golden chalice symbolizes devotion and abundance, communion with the divine through the Barqeten belief that existence itself is worship. It also reflects the house's legendary wealth and hospitality, the 180,000 Rern fortune that makes them the masters of nobility. The golden hunting horn is the call to justice. When House Arvento sounds the horn, the Council of the Forsaken rides. It represents the Arvento Night Soldiers and the family's philosophy that being neutral does not mean being passive, it means being the one who decides when the hunt begins.

House Colors: Green and Gold. Green for growth, prosperity, and the fertile territory of Northern Aicruae. Gold for wealth, divine favor, and the Barqeten belief that a well-lived life honors the gods.

Motto: "For the Honor of the Lost One." The motto honors Saint Galamma, the Third Saint, called "The Lost One." Blessed by the god Sielaph, Galamma was kidnapped and executed at eighteen after being falsely accused of being a demon during a time of religious hysteria. Her death became the world's cautionary tale about prejudice and rushing to judgment. House Arvento's devotion to justice, the Council of the Forsaken, the Infant Laws, the Arvento Code, their relentless pursuit of anyone who wrongs them, is framed as honoring Galamma's memory. They will not let the innocent be destroyed by the ignorant. Not again.

Power & Influence

Source of Power

Social influence, magical weapons production, international trade, accumulated wealth, and the Council of the Forsaken.

Succession & Inheritance

House Arvento follows a firstborn-inherits system: the first child born to the ruling couple becomes heir, and that person's first child becomes next in line. In the case of twins, whichever child is delivered first receives the title. Women can inherit the family's power and keep the Arvento name while married, if no male heirs are present a right established by Warias Arvento and first exercised by his daughter Zahali.

The house also operates on "Worthy Nobility" the philosophical principle (created by Rorca Arvento) that nobles must act in a way befitting their status and favorability, meaning how much the people love you matters to your standing within the family.

Wealth

180,000 Rern. Called "the master of nobility." They are the undisclosed leaders of the social circles, and falling out with them is the fastest way to lose respect and standing among the Aicruan elite.

Military

The Arvento Night Soldiers guards and knights created by Chiane Arvento, charged with protecting Aishae, Arvento territory, and all family members. House Arvento's military isn't the largest in Aicruae, but their supply of magical weapons (Warrior Hearts, Gifted Objects, and the Swords of Aishae) makes them a threat nobody wants to test. Every house needs House Arvento for something, but House Arvento is extremely selective about who they let in.

Territory

The town of Aishae in Northern Aicruae, plus the port built around it after the Battle of Aishae (8,704 BR). Arvento territory is known for its excellent roads.

Key Industries

Gifted Objects Magical items and jewelry created by infusing gems with magic (pioneered by Sekara Arvento)

Warrior Hearts Magical weapons (created by Aleja Arvento)

The Swords of Aishae Seven legendary swords commissioned by Toann Arvento

International Trade Trade route with Vikistv, opened by Liaduer Arvento, focused on magical goods

Social Influence Undisclosed control over noble social circles across Aicruae

Alliances & Rivalries

Allied Houses

House Patton (Royal Family) The oldest alliance in Aicruae. Stems from the personal friendship between King Haliour Layern Patton I and Lenkitta Arvento, who served as his close friend and advisor during the founding of the kingdom. Lenkitta also served as advisor to King Benjaien Nefest Patton. The Arventos have functioned as trusted advisors and scholars to the throne since the very beginning.

House Aedria Two marriage alliances (Rorca Arvento married Bariaro of House Aedria; Laitha Arvento I married Jeart Aedria). Both families are members of the Council of the Forsaken.

House Caraen Marriage union between Jomerra Arvento and Philero Caraen. Both families are members of the Council of the Forsaken.

Rival Houses

House Vika Ongoing rivalry. [TBD specifics of rivalry]

House Baliva (Former/Destroyed) Generational blood feud spanning centuries. Began with the kidnapping of Mozuna Arvento by Gaver Baliva, escalated through Tilan Arvento's campaign of destruction, and culminated in the War of World's End (8,201 BR – 8,152 BR), also called the Hundred-Year War. House Baliva was completely destroyed.

Marriage Alliances

Rorca Arvento → Bariaro of House Aedria

Laitha Arvento I → Jeart Aedria

Jomerra Arvento → Philero Caraen

Daneya Arvento → Olar Patton (forced marriage the king's cousin was given to Daneya as compensation after the queen deformed Daneya's face)

House Culture

Religious Affiliation

Barqeten one of the three sub-religions within the Circle of Eternal Light. Followers of Barqeten believe that by simply existing, they are worshipping the gods. They place great importance on both physical and mental wellness, believing that because they were created by god, they should do the most to take care of themselves and others to make the gods proud. Barqeten is also followed by Houses Leva, Aedria, and Yurea.

Traditions

[TBD]

Values

Beauty, elegance, self-preservation, scholarly pursuit, justice (through the Council of the Forsaken), and wellness (rooted in Barqeten faith).

Reputation

At their peak, the family had built an immense fortune and held staggering influence. They took part in almost every war, secured peaceful victories through sharp diplomacy, and backed talented artists from across the world. The name "Arvento" was etched into every corner of the world.

"House Arvento is feared and respected by the other houses despite its neutral status because of just how much power they wield. Arvento means Morning Wind for two reasons: their sheer beauty and ferocious strength, which is capable of breaking down even the tallest building. Even the royal family can't question them. They're just as bad as the other houses but no one has the guts to say it."

How Others Perceive Them

The undisclosed leaders of social circles. Falling out with them ensures loss of respect and standing. Elegant and beautiful on the surface, but dangerous when pushed.

History

Founding

Lenkitta Arvento whose ancestors traced back to Gherci created House Arvento in 8,746 BR with the help of her friend King Haliour Layern Patton I, just thirteen years after the founding of House Patton and the kingdom of Aicruae. Lenkitta was self-reliant and believed that her family was meant to be divine workers of the gods. She served as a close advisor to two kings (Haliour I and Benjaien Nefest Patton) and helped bring forth the period known as the Warriors' Age. She is widely praised as the reason behind Aicruae's early success.

Rise to Power

House Arvento's defense at the Battle of Aishae (8,704 BR) marked their transformation from loyal counselors to a true military power. They constructed a port at Aishae as a forward base, granting them maritime dominance in Northern Aicruae.

Major Achievements

Battle of Aishae (8,704 BR) Defended the coastal town against House Baliva; built the port that became their seat of power.

Infant Laws (8,683 BR) Humanitarian laws created by Jomerra Arvento, protecting infants and mothers regardless of social class. Allowed children to legally separate from abusive family members.

The Arvento Code (8,126 BR) Comprehensive set of laws standardizing fair taxation, trade rights, and port regulations across Aicruae. Became the de facto constitution and influenced the later Imperial Code.

Council of the Forsaken (8,051 BR) Underground justice alliance with Houses Aedria and Caraen, created by Wilgen Arvento. Has the king's approval. Since its founding, the council has brought Aicruae's crime rate down to 30%.

Opening Trade with Vikistv International trade route for magical goods, established by Liaduer Arvento.

Gifted Objects Magical items created by infusing gems with magic. Pioneered by Sekara Arvento, who became the wealthiest person alive during her lifetime.

Warrior Hearts Magical weapons company created by Aleja Arvento.

The Swords of Aishae Seven legendary swords commissioned by Toann Arvento.

Medical Breakthroughs Treatment for Sela Meysei (Night Terrors), pioneered by Taharry Arvento. Hospital establishments and "The Greater Truth" (a medical/sex-ed text), created by Finshall Arvento.

The Poison Kan Created by Sina Arvento to execute the men responsible for the Taguar Murders.

Major Disgraces

The Daneya Arvento Incident Daneya was deformed by the queen after an affair with the king. Her brother Taveln had the queen eaten by hunting dogs. Daneya wore the queen's collected blood in a necklace, poisoned her own son and husband, and became the first Arvento to receive punishment from the crown.

The Mozuna Arvento Kidnapping Mozuna was kidnapped at age sixteen by Gaver Baliva. She returned pregnant. Her father had Gaver hunted and killed.

The War of World's End (8,201 BR – 8,152 BR) Started by Tilan Arvento to destroy House Baliva. The hundred-year war nearly annihilated House Arvento itself. Tilan and both his sons died. Only Viason Arvento, a twelve-year-old orphan, survived to rebuild.

The Caxel Arvento Scandal Former heir who abandoned his legal wife and noble title for a commoner woman. Forced his legal wife to marry his much younger brother. Caxel, his lover, and their two sons all died of famine the following year.

Council of the Forsaken formed (8,051 BR)

The Council of the Forsaken

The Council of the Forsaken was created in 8,051 BR by Wilgen Arvento, granddaughter of Sina Arvento (the woman who invented the poison Kan). Where Sina answered violence with poison, Wilgen answered it with institutions.

The council is an alliance of the three neutral noble families Arvento, Aedria, and Caraen functioning as an underground justice organization. They investigate violent crimes, track down perpetrators, and deliver punishment. They operate with the full approval of the crown.

Since its founding, the Council of the Forsaken has brought Aicruae's crime rate down to 30%.

That number is not a typo. A shadow organization run by three noble families, answering to no one except the king, reduced an entire kingdom's crime rate to 30%. The council is greatly feared and deliberately so. They are not interested in reform or rehabilitation. They are interested in consequences.

The council also reflects something important about Arvento's version of neutrality. House Arvento, House Aedria, and House Caraen all claim to stand apart from the factional politics of Aicruae. But the Council of the Forsaken is not neutral. It is a concentrated, crown-backed enforcement arm operated by the three families that call themselves neutral. They have the authority to pursue traitors, vigilantes, and violent criminals anywhere in the kingdom.

Being neutral doesn't mean being passive. It means being the one who decides what counts as justice.

The War of World's End

The War of World's End also called the Hundred-Year War lasted from 8,201 BR to 8,152 BR and nearly destroyed House Arvento entirely.

The war's roots go back a generation, to Mozuna Arvento. The "princess of Arvento" beloved, privileged, known worldwide as her father's heart was kidnapped at sixteen by Gaver Baliva. Gaver was twenty, the grandson of the head of House Baliva, and his interest in Mozuna had turned into a sick obsession. When Mozuna returned home pregnant, House Baliva tried to claim she had gone willingly. Mozuna's father had Gaver hunted and killed.

Mozuna's son, Moneli, was treated as a stain on the family. His grandfather, aunts, and uncles called him a bastard and said he should never have been born that his father had "defiled" their beloved Mozuna. Despite this, Moneli loved his family.

It was Mozuna's father, Tilan Arvento, who lit the match. Tilan destroyed the remaining members of House Baliva and started a war that consumed nearly fifty years of bloodshed. The War of World's End earned its name it felt like the conflict would outlast the world itself.

Tilan and both of his sons died during the war. Moneli the bastard the family despised died trying to protect his aunt during the fighting. House Arvento was left on the brink of extinction.

What saved them was a twelve-year-old boy.

Viason Arvento, Moneli's son, raised by his aunt Kaderia after both his parents were killed took control of the family at twelve. He married his cousin Asya, fathered seven sons and three daughters, and spent his life reversing the damage his grandfather Tilan had caused. He repaired the relationships Tilan had shattered within the noble hierarchy. And in a quiet act of closure, Viason buried his father Moneli alongside his grandmother Mozuna and his grandfather Gaver Baliva together, on the family's land.

Many say the War of World's End only truly came to an end the day Viason died.

Notable Members

The Founders (8,784 BR – 8,639 BR)

Lenkitta Arvento (8,784 BR – 8,702 BR) Name meaning: Fair and True. Founder of House Arvento. Self-reliant and devout, Lenkitta believed her family was meant to be divine workers of the gods. She served as close friend and advisor to King Haliour Layern Patton I and helped oversee the construction of Aicruae. She later served as advisor to King Benjaïen Nefest Patton the only non-royal to serve two kings in an advisory capacity. She helped bring forth the Warriors' Age and is praised as the reason behind Aicruae's early success. Her ancestors traced back to Gherci before migrating to Aicruae.

Chiane Arvento (8,734 BR – 8,701 BR) Name meaning: Sweet. The first true warrior of House Arvento. Chiane became a knight to avenge her husband and eldest son, who she believed were set up to die in the Battle of Aishae. She created the Arvento Night Soldiers the guards and knights charged with protecting Aishae, Arvento territory, and all family members. Her military system became the backbone of House Arvento's defense for generations.

Jomerra Arvento (8,681 BR – 8,639 BR) Name meaning: Withstanding/Sheltering. A scholar who refused to marry at the typical age to further her education. She created the Infant Laws (8,683 BR), which protected the rights of children in Arvento territory and allowed kids to legally separate from abusive family members. Her marriage to Philero Caraen solidified the alliance between House Arvento and House Caraen many consider this her "biggest" contribution, but her Infant Laws were the real legacy.

The Scholars & Healers (8,622 BR – 8,496 BR)

Taharry Arvento (8,620 BR – 8,574 BR) Name meaning: Peaceful Rain. An heir to House Arvento widely considered a genius. She created and pioneered the use of medical herbs and worked to treat patients suffering from Sela Meysei (Night Terrors).

Aleja Arvento (8,622 BR – 8,590 BR) Name meaning: Honoring God. One of the saddest fates of any Arvento woman. Aleja expanded the family's jewelry business and created Warrior Hearts a company focused on producing magical weapons. She was poisoned by her lover at age thirty-two when he tried to stop her from leaving him.

Finshall Arvento (8,590 BR – 8,496 BR) Name meaning: Fishing Port. One of Taharry Arvento's sons. Finshall worked with his mother to create medical books, specifically about safer sexual practices. He was openly gay and had the full support of his mother and the entirety of House Arvento. He lived to ninety-four, creating hospital-like establishments within Arvento territory. His medical book "The Greater Truth" essentially a sex-ed textbook covering personal hygiene and sexual relations is still taught widely throughout Aicruae, though some sections have been redacted since publication.

The Daneya Saga (8,596 BR – 8,536 BR)

Bieln Arvento (8,596 BR – 8,502 BR) Name meaning: Flower in Bloom. Mother of Daneya and Taveln. When she heard what happened to her daughter, she went mad with rage and killed several members of the late queen's noble house (House Baliva). She stole their treasures and gifted them to Daneya. She kept the late queen's sister as Daneya's lady's maid and experimented on her with "herbs." After the queen's sister died, Biel had Daneya bathe in her blood in a ritual called the Ritual of Twelve, hoping to restore Daneya's ruined appearance.

Daneya Arvento (8,572 BR – 8,533 BR) Name meaning: Beautiful Morning. The first Arvento to receive punishment from the crown. Daneya allegedly seduced the king, and the queen deformed her face in retaliation. Her brother Taveln had the queen eaten by hunting dogs. Daneya collected the dead queen's blood and wore it in a necklace known as "Daneya's Luck." Taveln then forced the king to give his cousin Olar Patton to Daneya in marriage since the queen's actions had ruined Daneya's prospects. Olar Patton was rumored to have been the late queen's lover. Daneya eventually poisoned both her son Rinden and her husband Olar.

Rinden Arvento (8,552 BR – 8,536 BR) Name meaning: Bastard Born/Inferior Bloodline. The son of Daneya Arvento and Olar Patton. Daneya used him as a tool to torture his father she would burn and cut his hair, and there are rumors she cut out his tongue when he called her "mother." Rinden grew up severely ill with much slower development than his peers. He and his father were poisoned by Daneya just before Rinden's coming-of-age ceremony. His soul is said to linger around House Arvento's territory.

Warriors & Reformers (8,284 BR – 8,218 BR)

Casmin Arvento (8,284 BR – 8,238 BR) Name meaning: Meadow Above the Sea. One of the four wielders of the Swords of Aishae. A war hero who fought hand-in-hand with Dexona Vika in perfect sync during the Bloody Winter. Casmin and Dexona were said to be madly in love but were separated by their families. He gave his second sword which he'd named Lord's Favorite to Dexona after the war, and she used it to win countless fights. Casmin died ten years before Dexona, and she spent the rest of her life sneaking away to visit his burial site.

Warias Arvento (8,274 BR – 8,218 BR) Name meaning: Sharp Weapon. Not an Arvento by birth Warias was an orphan who married into the family after becoming a well-known knight. He theorized that Arvento should always remain neutral if they wanted to survive. He also created the family code and laws giving women the right to inherit the family power and keep the Arvento name while married, if no male heirs were present. His daughter Zahali was the first to benefit from this legacy.

The War of World's End (8,239 BR – 8,101 BR)

Tilan Arvento (8,239 BR – 8,170 BR) Name meaning: Dryness. Father of Mozuna Arvento. Tilan destroyed the last members of House Baliva and started the War of World's End (8,201 BR – 8,152 BR), also called the Hundred-Year War. He and both his sons died during the conflict, leaving House Arvento on the brink of ruin. His remaining daughter Kaderia adopted Moneli's son Viason and saved the house from extinction.

Mozuna Arvento (8,217 BR – 8,182 BR) Name meaning: Music. Called "the princess of Arvento." Mozuna lived a life of comfort and incredible privilege, known worldwide as the honor and treasure of House Arvento many called her "the heart of her father." She was kidnapped at age sixteen by Gaver Baliva, a relative of House Baliva who had developed a sick obsession with her after learning she was an Arvento. Gaver was twenty at the time. House Baliva initially claimed Mozuna ran away with him, calling Gaver a "distant relative" to deflect criticism — but he was actually the third son of the head of House Baliva's second son. Mozuna returned home pregnant. Her father had Gaver hunted and killed. Whether Mozuna went willingly or was taken by force remains disputed.

Moneli Arvento (8,201 BR – 8,162 BR) Name meaning: Source of Love. Son of Mozuna Arvento and Gaver Baliva. Considered a bastard by the family, Moneli was treated horribly by his grandfather, aunts, and uncles after his mother's death. They claimed his father had ruined Mozuna's honor and that Moneli should never have been born. Despite everything, Moneli loved his maternal family and died trying to protect his aunt during the War of World's End. His aunt Kaderia adopted his son Viason.

Viason Arvento (8,164 BR – 8,101 BR) Name meaning: Visionary Light. "The People's Prince." Moneli's son and the last remaining heir to House Arvento after the War of World's End. At twelve years old, Viason took control of the family and married his cousin Asya Arvento, daughter of his aunt Kaderia. Their union produced seven sons and three daughters. Viason reversed the tensions his grandfather Tilan had caused within the noble hierarchy because of the destruction of House Baliva and buried his father Moneli alongside his grandmother Mozuna and his grandfather Gaver Baliva together on the family's land. Many say the War of World's End only truly came to an end upon Viason's death.

Justice & Philosophy (8,143 BR – 7,857 BR)

Sina Arvento (8,143 BR – 8,033 BR) Name meaning: Last Hope/Ray of Joy. Created the poison Kan, designed for those convicted of horrific acts like rape or murder. Sina believed such criminals should suffer the pain of their victims until their last breath. Kan is blue in color and smells like strong cinnamon. Once ingested, it slowly crushes the victim's blood vessels, then causes sharp chest pain. The heart stops beating and the eyes turn blood red. It takes two hours to kill, and the victim is in agony the entire time. Sina created Kan specifically to execute the men responsible for the Taguar Murders in Northern Aicruae.

Wilgen Arvento (8,105 BR – 8,004 BR) Name meaning: Reserved. One of Sina Arvento's granddaughters. She continued her grandmother's work of just punishment by creating the Council of the Forsaken (8,051 BR) an alliance of the three neutral noble families (Arvento, Aedria, and Caraen) that functions like a police force investigating violent crimes and punishing perpetrators. The council has the crown's approval and has brought Aicruae's crime rate down to 30%. It is greatly feared.

Kyatane Arvento (7,954 BR – 7,867 BR) Name meaning: Silent Truth. Described by many as "a headache that wouldn't go away." Known for running away and ignoring her noble responsibilities, refusing to play her part in the family legacy. That was until she turned seventeen after leaving Arvento on what she called a spiritual journey, she wrote "The Rise and Fall of a King," a book that enraged high society for its anti-noble stance. Members of House Arvento praised her anyway.

Rorca Arvento (7,925 BR – 7,857 BR) Name meaning: A Thorned Rose. Created the concept of Worthy Nobility the idea that nobles must act in a way befitting their status. She developed this philosophy after reading her aunt Kyatane's book "The Rise and Fall of a King." Rorca is quoted as saying: "A king is nothing without his subject, while the people can survive just fine without a King." She was described as gentle and compassionate and married Bariaro of House Aedria she proposed to him, and he accepted. They lived happily until Rorca died at sixty-eight. Bariaro died at seventy-one. Without Rorca, he spent his last days in agony.

The Golden Age (7,651 BR – 7,256 BR)

Laitha Arvento I (7,651 BR – 7,582 BR) Name meaning: Snowy Trail. Quick to anger, focused, imaginative, and wacky. The second Arvento woman to marry into House Aedria. Laitha I was a skilled writer who composed several books "Mischievous of the Night," "Why the Songbird Sings," and "Lover's Sincerity." Her novels were wildly popular with noble ladies who dreamed of romance free from titles and obligation. She became the first and only woman to receive the title of Golden Pen. Every male lead in her books was based on her husband Jeart Aedria, and each novel was supposedly inspired by their love story in dramatized form.

Sekara Arvento (7,442 BR – 7,376 BR) Name meaning: Maiden. Born after the Siege of Highwater. Seeking to make her family safer in the aftermath of that devastation, she developed the idea of infusing gems and jewels with magic to create items for specific purposes. These became known as Gifted Objects. During her lifetime, Sekara Arvento was the wealthiest person alive.

Liaduer Arvento (7,429 BR – 7,312 BR) Name meaning: To Seek. Expanded House Arvento's production of Gifted Objects by partnering with a Magic User from Vikistv to mass-produce them. He also opened trade between Aicruae and Vikistv the first international magical trade route. During his lifetime, House Arvento accumulated over 55,000 Rern, an amount that tripled well after his death.

Caxel Arvento (7,411 BR – 7,397 BR) Name meaning: Bird/Winged Creature. A former heir to House Arvento who threw away his noble title to be with a common woman who had borne him two sons. He abandoned his legal wife and forced her to marry his much younger brother to secure the family line. Caxel, his lover, and their two sons died of famine the following year. The scandal tainted House Arvento for a long time.

Toann Arvento (7,400 BR – 7,321 BR) Name meaning: Oak Wood. A devout believer with a particular devotion to Saint Aliirusk. Toann believed he was a reincarnation of Aliirusk and spent much of his life searching for the legendary sword Allironek. When he failed to find it, he commissioned seven "divine" swords the Swords of Aishae. By the time they were finished, he was too old to wield them, so he gifted them to his children: each of his three sons received two swords, and his daughter received four.

Raninic Arvento (7,305 BR – 7,256 BR) Name meaning: Overwhelming Joy. Son of Liaduer Arvento. Rebuilt House Arvento's home in Aishae and centered a trading port around it. He redesigned the house crest and created the family motto ("For the Honor of the Lost One"). Known as "the creator of New Age Arvento" the person who brought forth the golden age of the family.

The Daneya Arvento Incident

The Daneya Incident is the darkest chapter in House Arvento's history and that's saying something for a family that also fought a hundred-year war.

Daneya Arvento was called "beautiful morning." She became involved with the king, and when the queen discovered the affair, she deformed Daneya's face in a fit of rage. What followed was a cascade of violence that spiraled far beyond revenge.

Daneya's brother TaveIn retaliated by having the queen eaten alive by hunting dogs. After the queen's death, Daneya collected the blood from the body and wore it in a necklace she called "Daneya's Luck." TaveIn then forced the king to give his cousin, Olar Patton, to Daneya in marriage since the queen's actions had destroyed Daneya's ability to find another suitable match. There was a cruel irony to this arrangement: Olar Patton was rumored to have been the dead queen's lover.

Daneya's mother, Bieln, made things worse. She killed several members of House Baliva (the queen's family), stole their treasures for Daneya, and kept the dead queen's sister as Daneya's personal servant. Bieln experimented on the queen's sister with herbs, and after the woman died, Bieln forced Daneya to bathe in her blood in the Ritual of Twelve a desperate attempt to restore Daneya's ruined appearance.

The worst was still to come. Daneya turned her suffering outward onto her own family. She used her son Rinden as a tool to torture his father Olar. She burned and cut the boy's hair. Rumors say she cut out his tongue when he called her "mother." Rinden grew up severely ill. Just before his coming-of-age ceremony, Daneya poisoned both Rinden and Olar.

Daneya became the first Arvento to receive any kind of punishment from the crown. She was called a witch. And Rinden's name meaning "Bastard Born/Inferior Bloodline" tells you everything about how the family saw the child she created and destroyed.

His soul is said to still linger around House Arvento's territory.

Strengths & Weaknesses

What They're Known For

Magical weapons and items (Gifted Objects, Warrior Hearts, Swords of Aishae)

Social dominance over the Aicruan nobility

Legal innovations (the Arvento Code, the Infant Laws)

The Council of the Forsaken

Scholarship and literary output (five major books, medical texts)

Medical advances (Night Terrors treatment, hospitals, "The Greater Truth")

International trade connections with Vikistv

What They Lack

[TBD]

Vulnerabilities

Internal family drama has nearly destroyed them more than once. The Daneya Incident brought crown punishment for the first time. The War of World's End killed three generations of heirs and left a twelve-year-old in charge. The Caxel scandal tainted their reputation for years. For a family that preaches "Worthy Nobility," the Arventos have a pattern of producing members who are anything but.
