Why They Matter

House Catern holds the Archduke rank because of what they guard: the twin territories of Aryanara and Vekta, where the founders of the Circle of Eternal Light once taught. Their motto claims three things at once: guardianship of truths from the primordial era, protection of the physical lands where the twins taught, and spiritual allegiance to the Circle's founding principles. They stand as a bulwark against competing beliefs like the Brotherhood of Westwinds. In a kingdom where religious power outranks the crown, being the guardians of Gherci's oldest sacred ground makes House Catern something more than just another noble house. They are keepers of the origin story itself.

Heraldry

Crest: A mighty white elephant stands at the center, flanked by two flaming braziers that burn with red and white fire. The elephant is depicted in profile with trunk raised, positioned upon a black horizontal band that divides the shield, with the upper and lower fields both in white. Below the elephant, a red poppy or similar flower with green leaves provides a touch of life and remembrance.

Symbolism: The elephant, associated with strength, wisdom, memory, ancient power and endurance, connects directly to the motto's reference to "the age of origin." The ceremonial fires suggest the forge of civilization and the eternal flame of tradition. The red poppy beneath the elephant introduces life and remembrance. The combination positions House Catern as guardians of primordial strength and keepers of foundational traditions for the lands of Aryanara and Vekta.

Motto: "For the age of origin and for the strength of Aryanara and Vekta."
