Heraldry

Crest: This noble crest presents a quartered shield with a striking balance of silver-grey and gold, divided vertically down the center and then horizontally across the middle, creating four equal sections that alternate between grey (upper left and lower right) and white or pale cream (upper right), with the lower left quarter rendered in brilliant gold. At the heart of the composition rests a large white circle, representing the full moon, which dominates the central intersection of the quartering and serves as the backdrop for the house's primary symbol: two crossed swords arranged in an X formation, their blades gleaming silver-white while their hilts and grips are wrapped in rich brown leather, topped with golden pommels that catch the light. The swords cross precisely at their centers, creating perfect symmetry and balance.

Symbolism: The duality of the crossed swords symbolizes what defines House Kifan: tradition and progress, earthly strength and celestial wisdom, the warrior's blade and the mystic's vision. The moon behind the swords reinforces their motto "The Moon is where we come from," suggesting that their martial prowess is guided by lunar wisdom and spiritual connection. The crossing of the blades represents their openness to new ideas meeting old values, the intersection of past and future, and the protective stance they take as guardians of both terrestrial and celestial heritage.

Motto: "The Moon is where we come from."
