Heraldry

Crest: The crest of House Ochanan is quartered into four distinct sections, each representing a different aspect of the land they hold sacred. The upper left quarter features a warm rust-red field crossed by horizontal yellow stripes, suggesting cultivated earth and harvest rows or the stratified layers of geological time. The upper right presents a radiant golden sun against a pale yellow field, symbolizing the life-giving energy that makes all agriculture possible. The lower left is rendered in cool white with soft blue accents, evoking winter landscapes, snow-covered fields, and the dormant seasons during which the land rests and renews. The lower right displays horizontal stripes of grey-blue suggesting water, irrigation, and the rivers and rains that sustain the fertile territories of Coelum. Straddling all four sections, a large grey wolf stands in profile at the center of the shield, its body positioned across the dividing lines as if claiming dominion over every element of the natural world. The wolf, rendered in rich brown tones with its mouth open and tail curved, embodies loyalty, family bonds, and the protective instincts of the pack.

Symbolism: The wolf's placement across all four quadrants unifies the disparate elements (land, sun, snow, and water), embodying the house's belief that "The Land is the blood of our people." Just as the wolf is bound to its territory, so too are the Ochanans inseparably connected to their soil, tradition, and the primal strength of the pack that protects it.

Motto: "The Land is the blood of our people."
