Why They Matter

House Schmidtavaca Started off as a representative family in Equateiy but after absorbing to create the empire, eventually by Crandona's era they are counts and became a kind of family renowned for their musical abilities. House Schmidtavaca is a family of musical geniuses, but their legacy in the story is defined not by music but by love and tragedy. During Crandona's Era, Wioli Schmidtavaca, the sickly second son who couldn't live up to his family's gifts, fell in love with Eveli Cathon in the Caprlolan forest and died trying to retrieve her body during the rebellion against Merigen. He was struck down by over forty arrows. His death inspired a folk song that outlasted anything his talented family ever composed: "Wioli you desperate fool, you took a knife to your heart, then your golden hair went dark."

Heraldry

Crest: An ornate golden heraldic rose with five stylized petals and a detailed center, positioned prominently on a shield divided into quarters by a bold purple diagonal cross or saltire, with the rose placed at the intersection where the purple bands meet in the center. The background is divided into alternating sections of white or silver and gold or yellow, creating a striking checkerboard effect behind the purple saltire.

Symbolism: The golden flower represents beauty, achievement, and the blossoming of virtue. The purple cross, the color of nobility and sacrifice, serves as the literal shield that protects the flower. The alternating light and gold sections suggest the duality of defense and display, the hidden and the revealed, that characterizes a house whose reputation and dignity form their truest protection.

Motto: "Our Honor is Our Shield."

Notable Members

Wioli Schmidtavaca (Born 17 BR, DECEASED)

"The Desperate Fool"

The sickly second son of Count Schmidtavaca. Born to a family of musical geniuses, but he was no such genius, much to his parents' disappointment. He spent most of his days staring out his bedroom window, doing nothing besides sleeping. His brothers and cousins teased and bullied him, calling him a fool. His parents' embarrassment grew enough that they shipped him off to the countryside for "treatment."

While staying in the countryside, he met the girls living in the Caprlolan forest and fell in love with Eveli Cathon. When Eveli was killed during the rebellion against Merigen, Wioli stormed into battle despite being sick, trying to retrieve her body. He was struck down by over forty arrows.

Memorialized in a folk song: "Wioli you desperate fool, you took a knife to your heart, then your golden hair went dark."

Role in Narrative

Book Appearances: Book 3 (A Princess in Love)

Plot Significance: Wioli represents the cost of the rebellion on those who had no obligation to fight. His desperate, doomed charge to retrieve Eveli's body is one of the book's most tragic moments, memorialized in folk song.

Key Members in Story: Wioli Schmidtavaca (DECEASED).
