Historical Quotes

KYATANE ARVENTO

[•] "A king is not divine, but rather a steward appointed by the gods to safeguard the virtues of his realm.

Purity of heart and clarity of mind are his greatest armaments, for without them, he is sure to fall."

Context: From "The Rise and Fall of a King"

Chapter: [N/A - Historical Text]

Speaking To: General audience/readers

Why It Matters: Foundational philosophy on kingship in Aicruae

[•] "Let not a monarch dispatch his people to war for his own gain while offering no sacrifice of his own; such selfishness precipitates ruin."

Context: From "The Rise and Fall of a King"

Why It Matters: Establishes moral framework for royal duty

[•] "The king who speaks in contradictions and offers hollow promises shall preside over an empty court."

Context: From "The Rise and Fall of a King"

Why It Matters: Warning against political dishonesty

[•] "As the tides rise and fall, so too does the fate of the king, for it is the people's judgment that ultimately ordains his ascent and demise."

Context: From "The Rise and Fall of a King"

Why It Matters: Establishes that kings rule by consent

[•] "He who slays without just cause will, in turn, be met with the blade of retribution."

Context: From "The Rise and Fall of a King"

Chapter: N/A - Historical Text

Speaking To: General audience/readers

Why It Matters: Establishes cosmic justice - unjust killing invites karmic consequences

[•] "Even generosity, if boundless and indiscriminate, leads to downfall."

Context: From "The Rise and Fall of a King"

Chapter: N/A - Historical Text

Speaking To: General audience/readers

Why It Matters: Nuanced political philosophy; warns that even positive traits without wisdom cause ruin

Vekta (Twin Prophet, Co-founder of the Circle of Eternal Light, ~ 14,300 — 14,200BR): "They hear the good word of Song and defile it by calling it a cage. They do not understand that the cage is the only thing keeping them whole." - Written about souls who deliberately seek corruption to escape Noirta's cycle.

BOOK 1: A TALE OF A THOUSAND SONGS

SOLIS ELIAS PATTON

[★/// ☉ /○] "[Quote]"

Context:

Chapter:

Speaking To:

Why It Matters:

[</•] "I don't want to be loved because I'm king. Any fool with a crown gets loved. I want them to mean it."

[↔/•] "I know what I asked of you. I'm not going to pretend I don't. But this is what it means to sit where I sit. I'll carry it. That's mine to carry. Go home to your family."

[</•] "People keep asking me if I sleep at night. Like the answer changes anything. The dead are dead whether I sleep or not."

[</•] "I don't care what Arvento wrote. 'The tides rise and fall, so too does the fate of the king.' Fine. Beautiful. She didn't have to sit in this chair and decide which of her friends to send south knowing half of them won't come back."

ORCUS EMERE PATTON

[••] ""You have always bested me, brother, with arrows and with swords, with hair and with status. I refuse to live in a world where I must be reminded time and time again of my failure..."

Context: Final confrontation with Solis

Chapter: 64

Speaking To: Solis

Why It Matters: Encapsulates Orcus's entire arc—the jealousy, the pride, the tragedy

[/•] "There are no gods, only men."

Context: Philosophical statement rejecting divine authority

Chapter: [TBD - from Zyrathi quotes doc, needs chapter placement]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Reveals Orcus's worldview - he rejects the gods who failed to protect him and his mother; contrast with Solis pledging to Razar

[•/•] "House Vika has fallen and with me my blood so carefully drawn we die"

Placement: [TBD]

[</•] "You want to know the worst part? I don't even hate him. I hate that I don't hate him. It would be so much easier if he was cruel. But he's not. He just wins. He always just wins."

[/•] "Don't. Don't you dare stand there with his name in your mouth like it's some kind of answer. Solis is not the solution to every problem. Solis is the problem."

[</•] "She used to hum when she thought no one was listening. I've tried to remember the song for years. I can't. I remember her humming it. I remember the shape of it. But the actual notes are gone and I cannot get them back and I will never forgive him for that either."

[◁/●] Said to a soldier who asks if he's afraid: "Of dying? No. Of it not mattering? Every day."

Jaifey Yuera

[◁/●] "Men do not want to die. They will endure anything to avoid it hunger, shame, another man's boot on their neck. So we give them hope. It costs us nothing. We shall make slaves of those who wait, and they shall thank us for it. For, that is the ground between gods and men. That is where your house stands. Or have you forgotten that simple fact, Solis of the Great Aicruae"

[◁/●] "Men are not ruled by kings. They are ruled by the fear of what comes after. A good king simply learns to stand in front of that fear and let men mistake him for the cause of it."

[◁/●] "House Yurea was built by merchants. I was built for war. These two facts have never once agreed with each other. And yet here I stand."

[◁/●] "Give a man a reason to wait and he will never stop waiting. That is the whole of it. Every throne in history was built on the backs of men who were promised tomorrow."

[◁/●] "There is no crueler position than indispensable. You will never be rewarded for what you are. Only for what you can still provide."

[●/●] "He is the greatest king I have ever served. And it cost him nothing. That is the problem. He always wins whenever he plays, I fear that when he loses, he will not know how to stand"

[◁/●] "I came from a country that worships the dead. Aicruae worships the living. I learned early that one of these is easier to manage than the other."

[◁/●] "My daughter is queen. My house will outlast this empire. And I will die a general."

[◁/●] "A king who is loved by everyone is trusted by no one. Love is indiscriminate. It means nothing. Earn their fear. Their fear will never lie to you."

[◁/●] "He had everything he needed to win. Everything except the patience to wait and the stomach to be hated. Both fatal flaws. And neither of them are fixable."

[◁/●] "I've been underestimated my entire career."

IRIS ALEKA PATTON

[•/•] "I didn't wanna die so I took to killing others before they could kill me."

Context: Iris explaining her philosophy of preemptive violence

Chapter: [TBD - from Zyrathi quotes doc, needs chapter placement]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Distills Iris's entire survival logic into one line - her cruelty is rooted in the terror of being powerless again; mirrors her arc from forgotten princess to violent tyrant

[</•] "Orcus you have to be smart here if Solis takes the throne and with house Hige backing him do you really think they'd leave two potential heirs to the throne alive and well, stop be delusional or we'll lose more than a few gold coins"

Speaker: Iris (addressing Orcus)

Likely Placement: Early chapters, before the coup

[• •] "And Vika blood is what built that throne"

Speaker: or Iris (asserting Vika legitimacy)

Placement: [TBD]

[</•] "I want the entire Hige line erased from history"

Likely Speaker: Iris (after the coup)

Placement: [TBD]

[/•] "My father never looked at me the way he looked at Solis. My mother did, once, before she stopped looking at anything at all. I learned early that love in this family was a limited resource. I stopped competing for it."

[</•] "I don't need you to forgive me. I need you to move."

[/•] "I want to shout it to the gods that I was here, let them look upon me in shame in glory in awe but they shall look"

Speaker:Iris

Placement: [TBD]

[</•] "You don't have the luxury of a conscience right now. Neither do I. We can fall apart about it later, when we're alive to do it."

[•/•]"You think I don't know what I look like to you. I know exactly what I look like to you. I worked very hard to look like this."

[</•] "Orcus is the only person who has ever been afraid for me. Not of me. For me. That's a very small list. It has always been a very small list."

[↓/•] "You didn't eat this morning. I saw. Eat something or I'll be angry, and you know what happens when I'm angry." She set a plate down. "It's the lamb. You like the lamb."

[◁/●] "Grandfather always said appear gentle, act unassuming. He'd have hated how loud Orcus gets when he's losing."

[◁/●] "Kill the children too"

[◁/●] "And there should be no such god but me"

ESTERICA KULIO

[●] "You haven't won yet."

Context: Tea party confrontation with Harnua; Esterica challenging Harnua's assumed dominance

Chapter: 27

Speaking To: Harnua Kulio

Why It Matters: Establishes Esterica as a political player willing to confront Harnua directly; the tea party is their first open clash

[●]"Will you dance for me?"

Placement: [TBD]

[●]"Stop trying to conspire, there is no god given way to outrun your bloodline"

Placement: [TBD]

[●]"What do you find yourself praying for these days?"

Placement: [TBD]

[●]"I'm not asking you to choose. I would never ask you to choose. I'm only saying that some choices make themselves, eventually, and it's better to have thought about them before then."

[●] "I've never once asked anyone to destroy my enemies for me. They do it themselves, given enough time. All I do is wait. But she is a cunning bitch, if some effort is not put in to calm her, she will continue to bolden herself far above what she should be allowed. I will not receive a fate like that of the previous queen, especially from the likes of her"

[●]"I ordered that Bregaria necklace. The one from Isalian's collection.If I'm going to sit beside a king, I'm going to look like I belong there."

HARNUA KULIO

[●] "Your horse will get tired soon."

Context: Tea party confrontation with Esterica; Harnua's warning that Esterica's position beside Solis won't last

Chapter: 27

Speaking To: Esterica Kulio

Why It Matters: Establishes the rivalry between the half-sisters; foreshadows Harnua's eventual role in Esterica's death — the horse does tire, just not the way either expected

MIHEL KULIO

[•] "You must not wait for the snake to twist itself around your neck, you must cut it off while it is still sizing you up because when it is the snake's time to kill you, it will not hesitate."

Context: After Iris's death, counseling Solis on next steps

Chapter: 53-54 (after Iris dies at Rewqo)

Speaking To: Solis

Why It Matters: Mihel's philosophy of preemptive ruthlessness

[•] "There are always casualties in wars. When you decide to get revenge, you should be aware of the blood that will plague your hands."

Context: After Iris's death

Chapter: 53-54 (after Iris dies at Rewqo)

Speaking To: Solis

Why It Matters: Foreshadowing Solis's eventual Transformation

[•] "There are no such things as niceties in this game of politics my boy only closed smiles and wide eyes"

Speaker: Mihel

Placement: [TBD]

[•] "How many more people are going to have to die to justify your claim to the throne"

Speaker: Mihel to Orcus

[•] "I taught you how to be a king. That means I taught you how to do the things that kings do, including the things that good men don't."

[•] "You want my sympathy. I understand that. But you have a kingdom to hold and the people who want to take it from you are not going to wait while you grieve."

[•] "Watch him. Not because he's dangerous, though he is, but because a man who believes he's been cheated will spend his whole life collecting the debt. And one day he'll decide to collect."

DAME KISALELI

[•] "Glory to Orcus, the one true king."

Context: Dame Kisaleli's last words before death at the Fight of Titian

Chapter: 62

Speaking To: [Final declaration - possibly to Solis's forces]

Why It Matters: Demonstrates the depth of loyalty Orcus inspires in his followers - even in defeat, Kisaleli dies declaring him king; contrasts with the generals Orcus beheaded in Year One

[•] "Our entire lives will be lost for the sake of honor, for it is our honor to be born to you and it is our honor to die by you."

Context: Apart Dame Kisaleli's last words before death at the Fight of Titian to her mother.

Chapter: 62

Speaking To: [Final declaration - possibly to Solis's forces]

Why It Matters: Dame Kisaleli is addressing her mother and they have a frigid relationship, one of Aicruae's primary values is honor, and expresses her frustration about honor in her final remarks.

SER TARYRIA

[•] "I am no rat; do not think me such a fool—I will die defending my king."

Context: Ser Taryria refusing to betray Orcus when cornered by Solis's forces

Chapter: 63

Speaking To: [Solis's forces / captors]

Why It Matters: Shows Orcus's capacity to inspire genuine devotion despite his brutality - Taryria chooses death over betrayal; echoes Orcus's own choice in the throne room one chapter later

[•] "I know what you think of him. I've heard it all. And I'm telling you - I've served him. What you've heard and what I know are not the same thing. That boy you serve...what do they call him the bringer of light, Almighty and true KING of Aicruae....That is a boy deeply wounded, and though he wears a hat of a king, and decrees himself such, he is no more fit than what you deem of my lord and king Orcus. To serve him and to justify your ambitions you propel that boy to heights that even the gods cannot reach, you think that boy a king... to think I once thought you wise Mihel. You will lose more than you gain in this, and when you find yourself sipping on stale ale you will think to yourself why did I defy the will of the gods in search of a vulture"

[•] "How great it would be to live forever and to experience no mortal worries or sorrow but it is the will of the divine that has brought us here. As they have blessed us so be it, that they judge us. Let no mortal man..presume to do such for them simply because of rank.

DAME EXARA

[/ / / "I am a terrible mother for I shall wear my child's blood as victory and with honor."

Context: Dame Exara choosing duty/dynasty over her own child's life during the final campaign

Chapter: 63

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: One of the most devastating lines in the war — encapsulates the cost the conflict extracts from everyone; the war doesn't just kill soldiers, it forces mothers to sacrifice children for "honor"

QUEEN MIHAI JULIE PATTON

[•] "Your majesty, my brother died for you."

Context: Queen Mihai addressing the king about the sacrifices House Vika has made for the crown

Chapter: Speaking To: King Benjamin Lawrence Patton II Why It Matters: Reveals the political debt between the crown and House Vika; establishes Mihai as someone who believed she had earned her position - making the betrayal of the affair and Solis's favoring even more devastating

[↓ "Do you remember what you told me the night we were married? You said I would never want for anything. I'd like you to think about that."

[•]"I don't blame the boy. He didn't ask to be born. But I find it harder and harder to push blame when I blame the man who looked at everything I sacrificed and decided it wasn't enough. He gets to live with that. I get to live with everything else, the look of a boy, favorably him not of me."

King Benjamin Lawrence Patton II

[</•] "You have but one purpose, and that is to serve this family"

Speaker: King Benjamin Lawrence Patton II

Placement: [TBD]

[•/•] "You do not need a fickle thing like love you should love your duty and your duty alone should be enough solace"

Speaker: King Benjamin Lawrence Patton II

Placement: [TBD]

[</•] " There exists but one principle in this world, and that principle is such. We are of the noble house of Patton, and to be of Patton is to sit above human and just below god. For we are neither lesser than mortal but we cannot cling to the station of the divine. So hence we put ourselves forth as champions of superiors and stewards of our lesser.

BOOK 4: CROWN OF GLORY

MINARA GONIA

[★/☉] "This Empire was never meant to be saved, over and over again, more blood is shed and for what another millennium of violence...we need to stop trying to save something that should have never existed, otherwise our descendants will stand right where we are and so will their kin until there's nothing left to be saved."

Context: Minara questioning the worth of preserving the Empire after witnessing its cycles of violence

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Encapsulates the series' central theme the cycle of violence spanning millennia; Minara voices what every generation has felt but none has acted on until now

[↓/o] "So what if you don't have a family, I don't have one either, we could be each other's family and walk away from this cycle together."

Context: Minara reaching out to someone who shares her isolation - offering found family as an alternative to inherited pain

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Marks Minara's growth from bitter loner to someone capable of building bonds; the "cycle" reference ties her personal arc to the cosmic reincarnation theme

[●/o] "Help us save my brother, please I don't want him to die I've just gotten to know him. I know that you've given up on everyone and I know its a selfish ask but...he's the only family I have, the only one who can understand why I cry and laugh, he's my little brother."

Context: Minara pleading - likely to Leranoan/Soli - to save Elleraian after discovering he's her half-brother

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Professor Leranoan / Soli

Why It Matters: The girl who hated all nobles now begs to save a prince; "just gotten to know him" makes the potential loss devastating precisely because it's so new

[•] "At the end of the day you are our teacher so please lead by example if you want us to follow your teachings."

Context: Minara challenging Leranoan to practice what he preaches - calling out his hypocrisy or withdrawal

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Professor Leranoan / Soli

Why It Matters: Student holding teacher accountable; foreshadows Leranoan's eventual return to his responsibilities as Soli

[•] "I don't blame you honestly I've been there before but you told me while I was withering away letting anger consume me that there is nothing fulfilling about revenge."

Context: Minara echoing Leranoan's own words back to him - using his lesson against his despair

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Professor Leranoan / Soli

Why It Matters: Full-circle moment - the student becomes the teacher; Minara throws

Soli's own wisdom back at him when he needs it most; directly mirrors his quote about revenge

[★//] "Our blood carries a curse, It will never end so it will never stop being spilled."

Context: Minara acknowledging the inherited doom of the Patton bloodline

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Dual meaning — literal (royal blood invites assassination) and cosmic (the reincarnation cycle ensures the same souls keep suffering); potential marketing/cover quote

NIVAERAN VEIR

[•] "Dahnyliein never waits for anyone he's always way more concerned about wasting his own time, he's a stubborn old bastard but the dearest and meanest of all my friends."

Context: Nivaeran describing Dahnyliein to Minara affectionate ribbing that reveals their friendship dynamic

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Minara

Why It Matters: Establishes Nivaeran as the social bridge of the group; his ability to see past Dahny's cold exterior mirrors how he'll later see past Minara's walls
[•] "It's interesting how you seem to hate yourself, but hate us even more."

Context: Nivaeran cutting through Minara's hostility to name the self-loathing underneath it

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Minara

Why It Matters: Shows Nivaeran's emotional perceptiveness

— he doesn't just absorb Minara's anger, he reads what's behind it; the kind of line that makes her actually stop and think

[•] "Don't make me put my rank above your head to remind you just who I am."

Context: Nivaeran asserting his noble authority - rare flash of steel from the typically gentle character

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Minara

Why It Matters: Proves Nivaeran isn't a pushover despite his kindness; he's still an Earl's son and will use that weight when necessary; complicates the class dynamic between him and Minara

DAHNYLIEIN CATERN

[/ / o] "I'll wait for you."

Context: Dahnyliein kneeling to kiss Elleraian's head — likely after Elleraian falls into his coma during the Nightmare Realm Trial

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: Elleraian Betenadia Patton

Why It Matters: Four words that carry the weight of Dahnyliein's entire arc - the cold, distant heir who once couldn't express affection now makes the most vulnerable promise possible; devastating if Elleraian can't hear him

EMPRESS MACENJA / VANDREA

[</•] "Do you blame me for wanting them to suffer as I did?"

Context: Vandrea justifying her millennia-long campaign of destruction - framing her atrocities as proportional response to her own suffering

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD - likely Minara or Soli during the final confrontation]

Why It Matters: The question is rhetorical but genuine -

Vandrea truly wants to know; this is the line that makes her sympathetic even at her worst, because the honest answer is complicated; ties directly to the series theme of whether cycles of revenge can ever be justified

PROFESSOR LERANOAN / SOLI

[•] "I guess there are still some things that even the gods don't know."

Context: Leranoan/Soli admitting the limits of divine knowledge

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Quiet admission that godhood doesn't equal omniscience; humanizes Soli and reinforces the "world without god" theme — even gods are fallible

[•/•] "I have existed alone for thousands of years, and not once have they visited me, or asked me how I was doing after they took the love of my life away."

Context: Soli expressing his isolation and resentment toward the other gods who abandoned him after Apharia's death

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD]

Why It Matters: Explains why Soli renounced his godhood and lives among mortals — it wasn't just grief but abandonment; the gods punished him and then forgot him

[★/☉] "There is nothing fulfilling about revenge, because once you achieve it and you're by yourself, nothing really changes."

Context: Leranoan/Soli speaking from millennia of personal experience with loss and bitterness

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD - likely Minara or the group]

Why It Matters: The thesis statement of the entire series delivered by the one character who has lived long enough to know it's true; Minara later echoes this back to him — the student becoming the teacher; strong marketing quote

[•/◦] "I was once young and naive, too. I know it seems like you can control everything and make everything happen just because you want it, but life, no matter how much we think we control it, is an ugly creature that laughs in our faces."

Context: Soli reflecting on the gap between youthful ambition and reality

Chapter: [TBD]

Speaking To: [TBD - likely students]

Why It Matters: A god calling life "an ugly creature that laughs in our faces" carries different weight than a mortal saying it; Soli has literally tried to control existence and failed

RENEDIN

[★/// ☉] "You really think that fool Loart is your father?

You, pitiful, foolish child....I lingered in your mother's thoughts after Loart's death, feeding on her grief, infecting her thoughts with sorrow, and just when she was close to the point of no return, I whispered a thought into her brain, a child to heal the wound of a true love lost, yes I made her think it was her doing, made her powers seem so immense, but she was not the one who created you at least not by herself it was I who fathered you. Though it did pain me to create with such a lesser god to me, the result, however, two twin gods with one soul, even though your other half Ekhasostio proved to be a disappointment, this half of you, became Paxtino, the great all mighty god of rebirth, the physical manifestation of Noirta, you created the world portals. You were perfect, through you and your thoughts, even if I wasn't physical, I could one day, in theory, have control of both the realm of mortals and the gods, but you and your silly childish fairy tales had to mess it up. Planning to run away with an insignificant mortal, after siring a child, I couldn't have it....it was I who whispered a thought to Vapaz when you first ran away, I led him right to you. I thought with that wife and child of yours dead by Vapaz's hands, you would finally become who I needed you to be....but no....you ran again, and while I've been controlling you with your sadness over their death for some time, now you decide to fight me? My dear and precious son, if it wasn't for you, Vandrea's soul wouldn't have been corrupted by me, you destroy everyone you love, you can't control it... You are just as much Ekhasostio as you are Paxtino. You should have turned your fury at Vapaz; you should have destroyed them where they stood, you are life and death and chaos and light; you are a being so complex you don't even understand. If I had lingered in your thoughts as you developed better, this wouldn't have happened.

It's really my fault; I'm a failure as a parent, but I do want what's best for my child. You could have been king of the gods, and I your regent. But now I have to kill you....and do you know what happens to gods who die? Did your mother ever tell you? The great song isn't as kind to gods as it was to humans. Humans exist in a constant cycle of death and rebirth, but we gods, once we die, we vanish, and it's slower and more painful than that of a mortal soul that has been corrupted. I watched my brothers die that way, breaking apart into ashes and then poof, nothing. I once thought you could reverse the cycle, bring my brothers back, and place them in the same cycle as humans. But you are weak, and cling too deeply to emotions...you were once my greatest creation, but now I see clearly you were a mistake and a waste of efforts."

Context: Renedin's full revelation to Leranoan/Soli revealing he is Soli's true father, that he manipulated Zopha into creating him, orchestrated Apharia and her child's deaths through Vapaz, and has been pulling strings across millennia

Chapter: [TBD - late-stage confrontation] Speaking To: Leranoan / Soli (Paxtino)

Why It Matters: The single most lore-dense speech in the series - rewrites the entire cosmology in one monologue; Renedin reveals he murdered Lady Gaialana, fathered the twin gods, caused Apharia's death, corrupted Vandrea, and has been manipulating Soli's grief for thousands of years; the "failure as a parent" line is chilling because he means it - his version of fatherly love is ownership and utility; the speech also establishes that gods die permanently (no reincarnation cycle), raising the stakes for Soli's survival

BOOK 4: A CROWN OF GLORY - PROPHECY

"When the Eclipsing Sun and the False Star meet, the old god shall shatter the world."

- Ancient prophecy discovered in the Solisian Academy archives (Chapter 27). "Eclipsing Sun" refers to Minara's hidden title as the Emperor's firstborn and eclipsed imperial sun, hidden since birth.
