

Confirmed and Decided Hows

This page logs the "how's" pass for World Without God — the second grounding sweep after the "whys" pass. Where the whys established why the godless world hangs together, the hows establish how it actually runs: governance, money, class, religion, war, family, time, sex, and the machinery of status. Everything here was decided in one working chat. For each system you get: the gap (what was unanswered), the pick (her exact choice, verbatim where given), how we got there, and the agreed canon.

Method (how every decision was made)

Same technique as the whys pass. One system at a time:

1. Restate the gap — what the world hadn't yet answered.
2. Lay out the cited canon already on the books.
3. Offer 2–3 options, each passing the GRRM test (a clear CAUSE, a COST/CONSEQUENCE, a WANT, and a WHY-NOW/WHY-THEM), plus a "blend / rank by era" option and room for a custom answer.
4. She picks (a single option, a blend, or a custom era-progression).
5. I deliver paste-ready flat reference prose in her lexicon; she pastes it into canon herself.

Ground rules held throughout: nothing is canon until she confirms; names are drawn from her existing lexicon, not invented wholesale; tone is flat and dry, never performative; cultures are inspiration, never copy (Sinitic material culture with no dragon motif and no obvious lifting); coined names are always flagged as swappable.

Order of decisions

Governance → calendar, in this sequence: court governance → capital court → provincial machine → succession → surveillance/justice → military → money → trade → class → religion → material life → knowledge → health → war → communication → family/inheritance → calendar → sex/courtship & the household → royal ranks & cross-branch rank → bestowed titles (paused).

GOVERNANCE

1. Court governance — the leashes

Gap: How does the crown actually keep its great servants and nobles from eating it alive?

Pick (verbatim): "Stack all three."

How we got there: Offered three rival mechanisms for binding power-holders (hostage/marriage ties, rotation/term limits, and informers/audit). She chose to stack all three rather than pick one.

Agreed canon — THE THREE LEASHES: The crown holds its servants by three overlapping leashes at once: (1) blood and marriage — heirs and brides kept near the throne as living surety; (2) rotation — high office is term-bound and movable, so no one roots into a post; (3) the watch — informers and audit running underneath everything. No single leash is trusted; the redundancy is the system. A man can slip one leash but rarely all three.

2. The capital court

Gap: What does the central government physically look like — offices, who sits where?

Pick (verbatim): "a+B" — combine the two proposed structures; flat, simple names only.

Options offered: (A) a functional ministry government organized by department and portfolio; (B) a household / inner-court government organized around the monarch's person and intimate service. She took both — hence the two rings below.

How we got there: Three rounds of naming corrections. Verbatim: "wtf are these names. use simple names why are all the names metaphoric and overly stylized"; "the sacral court is too spot on ... it should take inspo not be a copy"; "the writing is still too performative." Lesson locked: flat dry prose, names pulled from her lexicon.

Agreed canon — THE CAPITAL COURT: Two rings. An Outer Court (the working ministries) and an Inner Court (the household and the monarch's person). Named offices, all flat: Seteri, Renhal, Piesten, the First Army and Second Army commands, the Sevren, and the Esan. Court seat is Tarmet. Note correction: "Supreme Inner Court Keeper," "Main Master," and "Lord Protector of the Temple" are Teire (Gherci) religious titles, NOT imperial palace offices.

3. The provincial machine

Gap: How does the center actually rule the conquered six kingdoms day to day?

Pick (verbatim): "which using logic?" — she asked me to recommend the most grounded option.

Options offered: (A) direct centralized administration (crown officials replace the local lords); (B) indirect rule (govern through the existing houses); (C) a hybrid — indirect rule with a crown overlay. I recommended C, tied to the hard fact that the kingdoms were conquered and the old houses demoted, not destroyed.

How we got there: When she asks for the logical pick, I make a decisive recommendation tied to a hard canon constraint (the kingdoms were conquered, old royal houses demoted not destroyed).

Agreed canon — THE PROVINCIAL MACHINE: Indirect rule with a crown overlay. The old royal and noble houses are left in place to administer their own lands (cheap, and they know the ground), but a crown layer sits on top: touring inspectors (the Veren) who circulate and report, and direct military governorship imposed only on the kingdoms taken hardest by the sword. Carrot for the cooperative, boot for the rest.

4. Succession

Gap: How does the throne actually pass?

Pick (verbatim): "Designated heir."

Options offered: (A) strict primogeniture (the eldest inherits automatically); (B) designated heir (the sitting monarch names the successor); (C) elective/council succession (an heir chosen by a body). She took B.

Agreed canon — SUCCESSION: The sitting monarch names the heir. Not strict primogeniture, not election — designation, which keeps every potential heir dependent on the monarch's favor until the last breath (and guarantees a succession crisis whenever a monarch dies without naming clearly). The firstborn is styled the Eclipsing Sun but is not automatically the heir.

5. Surveillance & justice

Gap: Who watches, arrests, and punishes — and how is the secret-police function organized?

Pick (verbatim): "Crown swallows Council of the Forsaken."

Options offered: (A) the Council of the Forsaken stays independent as a check on the crown; (B) the crown absorbs it into the throne's own apparatus; (C) it is abolished and replaced. She took B.

Agreed canon — SURVEILLANCE & JUSTICE: The crown absorbed the old Council of the Forsaken into itself, turning a once-independent body into the throne's own organ of surveillance and enforcement. Justice runs through the Esan (the law-code and tribunals) above board, and through the absorbed Forsaken apparatus below it.

FORCE & MONEY

6. Military

Gap: What does the empire's armed force actually consist of?

Pick (verbatim): "A+B" — combine a standing professional core with capped noble levies.

Options offered: (A) a standing professional army paid by and loyal to the crown; (B) a noble-levy system (houses raise troops on call); (C) a mercenary/contract model. She combined A and B, with the levy caps acting as a leash.

Agreed canon — THE MILITARY: A standing professional core — the First Army and Second Army, roughly 200,000 between them — plus capped house levies (nobles may raise troops only up to a fixed ceiling, a leash in its own right), plus the absorbed Swords of Mertyeria. The standing armies answer to the crown; the levy caps stop any house fielding a force that could challenge it.

7. Money & revenue

Gap: What does the empire spend and tax in?

Pick (verbatim): "Blend / rank by era."

Options offered: (A) a single unified imperial currency; (B) multiple coexisting currencies of differing value; (C) commodity/barter-based exchange. She blended — multiple currencies coexisting and ranked, with the mix shifting by era.

Agreed canon — MONEY: Six currencies in circulation, ranked by value: Pel ($50), Kis ($30), Miuae ($26), Rern ($20), Brezeryiol ($17), Opeali ($5). The mix and relative standing shift by era; the crown's authority over coining and debasement is a lever of power in itself.

8. Trade & the underworld

Gap: How do goods, credit, and illicit money move?

Pick (verbatim): "Blend."

Options offered: (A) guild/charter-licensed trade under tight control; (B) freer open markets; (C) a state-monopoly model. She blended — licensed/chartered trade above the line and an underworld beneath it.

Agreed canon — TRADE: A blended economy — licensed guild and chartered trade above the line (the Crown Merchant charter lets a commoner trader buy quasi-noble standing, up to a Count-level ceiling), and a parallel underworld of smuggling, unlicensed lending, and black markets beneath it. The two interpenetrate; the crown taxes the legal layer and periodically raids the other.

SOCIETY

9. Class & daily life

Gap: How rigid is the social order, and can people move within it?

Pick (verbatim): "Fixed estates, rare mobility from above."

Options offered: (A) rigid castes with no movement at all; (B) fixed estates with rare, granted mobility; (C) a fluid/open class system. She took B.

Agreed canon — CLASS: Society is a set of fixed estates — you are born into your order and ordinarily die in it. Mobility exists but flows from above: it is granted (a bestowed title, a charter, a marriage approved by a superior), never simply seized from below. The merchant who buys a Count's title and the concubine's son who is elevated are both moved by someone with the power to move them. Ranks: Peasants < Piesto < Knights/Dames < Ashanti < Counts < Marquesses < Dukes < Archdukes < Royal, with Des/Der as royal kin.

10. Religion

Gap: In a world without a god, what is the religious structure and how does it relate to the crown?

Pick (verbatim): "Two-power balance."

Options offered: (A) a single dominant state church; (B) a two-power balance between rival religious institutions; (C) decentralized many cults. She took B (the Circle and the Teire), with Goteivati later collapsing it into crown control.

Agreed canon — RELIGION: Originally a two-power balance between the Circle and the Teire — two religious institutions checking each other and the crown.

Goteivati III ended the balance: he crushed the Circle, seized the temples, and folded religious authority under the throne, producing a Gallican-style caesaropapism (church subordinate to crown) that persists to the present. The two-power era is the "before"; the swallowed church is the "after."

11. Material daily life

Gap: What does the physical, lived world look like — dress, food, building, craft?

Pick (verbatim): "i like the material life of traditional chinsese without the dragon motif and the overly obvious copying."

Options offered: several real-world material-culture palettes to draw texture from across the six zones. She chose a Sinitic base — as inspiration, never copy, and without the dragon motif.

Agreed canon — MATERIAL LIFE: Sinitic-inspired material culture across the six cultural zones — but as inspiration, never copy. No dragon motif. Avoid any detail that screams a direct lift. Take the texture (silks, tea, courtyard architecture, calligraphy, porcelain, the aesthetic of restraint) and reskin it into her own world's flora, houses, and names.

12. Knowledge & the Academy

Gap: How is knowledge — especially magic — taught, licensed, and controlled?

Pick (verbatim): "Blend."

Options offered: (A) guild/apprenticeship transmission; (B) a central Academy that licenses practice; (C) open/unregulated learning. She blended, centered on the Academy as both university and licensing authority.

Agreed canon — KNOWLEDGE: A blended system centered on the Academy, which licenses the legal practice of magic and keeps the inheritance ledger (Article VII: bloodline-magic read to confirm legitimacy). Secular scholarship and magical training run together; the Academy is both university and licensing authority, which makes control of it a political prize. The Civil Exam is open to noble sons only.

13. Health, medicine & death

Gap: How do people heal, and how do they die?

Pick (verbatim): "Secular craft medicine + rare elite magic-healing."

Options offered: (A) magic-healing common and central to medicine; (B) no magical healing at all, pure craft; (C) secular craft medicine for all, with rare elite magic-healing for the few. She took C.

Agreed canon — HEALTH: Everyday medicine is secular craft — herbalists, midwives, surgeons, physicians working by skill and accumulated knowledge, no divine healing. Magic-healing exists but is rare and elite — expensive, licensed, reserved for those who can pay or command it. The ordinary person lives and dies by craft medicine; the powerful buy the rare exception.

REACH

14. War & diplomacy

Gap: How are wars fought and peace brokered beyond the empire?

Pick (verbatim): "Blend."

Options offered: (A) conquest by force as the main instrument; (B) marriage-and-alliance diplomacy; (C) mercenary/proxy warfare. She blended all three.

Agreed canon — WAR & DIPLOMACY: A blend of pitched standing-army campaigns, levied house forces, marriage-alliance diplomacy, and treaty/hostage arrangements. The Crown Envoy carries the monarch's voice abroad. Force and marriage are two faces of the same statecraft.

15. Communication & travel

Gap: How does information and how do people move across the empire?

Pick (verbatim): "Blend."

Options offered: (A) road-and-relay courier networks; (B) river and sea routes; (C) beacon/signal chains (plus the question of whether magic carries messages). She blended the mundane networks and kept magical communication rare.

Agreed canon — COMMUNICATION: A blended network — imperial roads and relay couriers (overseen by the Veren / the posts), river and sea routes, and a beacon/signal-relay chain for invasion warning. Speed of communication is itself a crown asset; whoever controls the relays controls how fast the center sees and speaks.

FAMILY, TIME, AND THE BODY

16. Family, marriage, gender & inheritance

Gap: How does descent, marriage, and inheritance actually work — and how did it change over time?

Pick (verbatim, custom spine): "Other: It starts of as House by House patchwork during six kingdoms era, solis era, conquest era, then it becomes cognatic and House by House mixture, after the dark ages and during the damned emperor's reign it bcomes Patriarchal primogeniture as the law all the way down to Minara's era."

How we got there: She rejected the standard options in favor of a precise three-stage historical progression, folding the matriarchal Matsiali in as a sub-layer of the cognatic middle stage.

Agreed canon — FAMILY, MARRIAGE & INHERITANCE (three-stage spine):

- Stage one — patchwork (Six Kingdoms era → Solis era → Conquest era): no single rule; each house follows its own custom for descent and inheritance.
- Stage two — cognatic + house-by-house mixture (early/high empire): descent can run through either line; the matriarchal Matsiali sits here as a high point of female-line inheritance and women's power.
- Stage three — patriarchal primogeniture as law (after the Dark Ages, under Goteivati III "the Damned," down to Minara's era): the eldest son inherits, by law, everywhere.

Throughout: marriage is a contract, not a sacrament (no god to swear before); legitimacy is settled by the Academy's inheritance ledger reading a child's bloodline-magic. The present patriarchy is "the youngest invention wearing the mask of the ancient."

17. Calendar, festivals & time

Gap: How is time counted in a world with no god to date it from?

Pick (verbatim): "Civil calendar (crown owns time — regnal years, the Reset)."

Options offered: (A) a religious calendar dated from a holy event; (B) a civil calendar owned by the crown (regnal years plus a secular Reset to year 0); (C) a natural/agricultural reckoning. She took B.

Agreed canon — TIME, THE CALENDAR & THE RESET: The crown owns time. The calendar Reset to year 0 at Goteivati's secular re-zeroing (a French-Revolutionary move — wiping the old religious count). Dates run BR / AR (Before Reset / After Reset). The Academy almanac fixes the official year (the year-name itself is swappable), and documents are double-dated (AR plus the regnal year of the sitting monarch). Underneath the civil calendar, the old solar/Razar festival year survives in rebranded or stripped-of-god form — the Circle and Teire holy days were rebranded or abolished, though Agariso 21 survives. An agricultural year runs beneath all of it.

SEX, COURTSHIP & THE HOUSEHOLD

18. Sex, courtship & relationships outside marriage

Gap: How does the society handle sex, courtship, and relationships outside marriage, in a world where no god polices virtue?

Picks (verbatim):

- Texture choice: "sex, courtship and relationships outside marriage, or art, music, theater and leisure" (do both, starting here).
- System choice: "Option A + B, Being a concubine and second wife is seen as lesser than. We need to decide how the ranks in the household can go and rules for the household..."

Options offered: (A) concubinage as a formal, legal institution (ranked, kept women within the household); (B) a courtesan/companion demimonde outside marriage; (C) neither / informal only.

How we got there: She picked A+B — Option A = formal concubinage and Option B = the courtesan demimonde — with the hard social rule that being a concubine or second wife is "lesser than." Then asked for household ranks, per-class caps, and the family hierarchy.

Agreed canon — THE HOUSEHOLD: WIVES, CONCUBINES & RANK:

Principle: one legal wife plus as many lesser women as rank and purse allow. No sin and no vow polices it — only property and bloodline do, because only one line inherits cleanly.

Three tiers:

1. The Wife — one only, full contract and dowry, mistress of the household, commands all other women; her children are the primary heirs. No two wives at once; "second wife" is a courtesy term, not a legal one.
2. Concubines / lesser wives ("the lesser than") — taken on a concubine's writ, no dowry (a one-time bride-gift at most), ranked by order taken and by the wife's favor; they eat and sit lower, are dismissible, and their children are legitimate-but-lower.
3. The demimonde — companion-women outside any household: no writ, no rank, no claim. Influence but no protection; first to be purged whenever the court wants a virtue display.

Floor: maids and servants hold no rank; unclaimed bastards likewise.

Per-class caps (sumptuary logic):

- Emperor / royal: one empress + a capped ceremonial consort/concubine ladder.
- Royal kin (Des) / Archduke / Duke: wife + 3–4.
- Marquess / Count: wife + 2.
- Ashanti / knights: wife + 1 (if affordable).
- Wealthy merchants: wife + 1 (sneered at as new money).
- Commoners / peasants: one wife only; concubinage is unaffordable.

Family hierarchy: husband → wife → husband's mother → senior concubine → junior concubines → unmarried daughters → nurses/upper servants. The wife outranks every concubine absolutely. Children rank by mother's tier first, birth order second — the wife's youngest outranks a concubine's eldest, unless the father elevates (the Solis mechanism).

Ledger & legitimacy: fixed by which woman bore the child and whether the father claims it, confirmed by the Academy inheritance ledger reading the child's magic against the registered father. A concubine's child carries the name and a marker, cannot represent the house, and inherits behind the wife's children.

Asymmetry (the maturity-dial point): a man's concubine is a sign of wealth; a woman's affair is capital ruin — the B.W. ("Blood Whore") brand, affair-children drowned. Nakedly about paternity, not virtue.

Era drift: Matsiali height (desire unpoliced, female-line, demimonde respectable) → high empire (ranked court concubinage, favored-bastard crises) → Goteivati/Pataoiut (affairs made capital, the B.W. brand weaponized via the ledger, women confined, demimonde driven underground) → Restoration/present (the hypocrite's paradox).

19. Women's ranks in the royal household

Gap: What ranks can a woman hold inside the royal household, and what comes with them?

Agreed canon — ROYAL HOUSEHOLD RANKS:

- The Empress (Queen) — one only, the monarch's single legal wife; styled Her Majesty, "the reflection of the moon"; holds the keys to the inner palace, commands every other woman. Authority is positional, not affectionate.
- The Dowager (Empress Dowager / Queen Mother) — the monarch's mother; often outranks the sitting empress in family matters; first candidate for regent. The most powerful seat a woman can hold.
- The consort ladder (below the empress, above the floor), each grade a legal status with stipend, servants, and sumptuary rights: Noble Consort (senior; sometimes styled "second wife"; her son can be named heir) → High Consort → Consort → Lesser Consort / Companion → Palace woman (unranked).
- Ascent by childbearing: the consort who bears the Eclipsing Sun (recognized firstborn) can leap grades; "mother of the Eclipsing Sun" carries weight the ladder alone cannot.
- Precedence note (canon-anchored): consorts rank below the trueborn heirs — a prince or princess outranks any consort who is not their own mother.
- Princesses styled by birth order ("the first moon," "the second moon"); Des kinswomen rank below the immediate family but above ordinary high nobility.
- Extraordinary honorifics outside the ladder: Mother Superior of Aicruae (held only once, by Isalian), Great Lady of House Patton, Mother of the Great

Dynasty — prestige and precedence, no governing power.

20. Rank across households & branches

Gap: How do noble families with multiple branches rank wives and husbands against each other?

Pick (verbatim, the rule she set): "the first legal wife of the first household should outrank the first legal wife of the second household."

Agreed canon — CROSS-BRANCH RANK (two axes):

1. Household seniority governs public precedence — the main line outranks every cadet branch; a higher-titled house outranks a lower one.
2. In-house tier governs legitimacy and inheritance within a single line — wife over concubine, trueborn over baseborn, always.

Consequences:

- The wife of the head of house (the Duke) outranks the wife of his younger brother who heads a cadet branch, though both are "first legal wives." The main-line wife is the Lady of House X; the cadet wife is Lady of [her estate].
- The Great Lady / dowager of the main line sits above all branch wives and arbitrates disputes among them.
- Where the axes collide: a senior household's concubine can take public precedence over a poor cadet branch's legal wife — but never touches inheritance, where tier governs the bloodline.
- Husbands who marry in (uxorilocal, or marriage to a ruling woman) rank by and below the wife, like a King Consort; their sons may carry her house's name.
- Moving between branches: marrying up raises you, marrying down lowers you; a large enough dowry (Isalian's was twice the royal treasury) buys precedence above your natal station.
- Tie-breakers (equal rank and tier): husbands' seniority → wife's natal house rank → date of marriage → number of trueborn sons.

- Era drift: Matsiali ranked households down the female line (husbands ranked as consorts); Goteivati's Pataoiut flipped it onto the male line; the present runs on patriarchal primogeniture, the main-line male's wife leading, his mother above her.

21. BESTOWED & FLOURISH TITLES (paused — in progress)

Status: Paused at her request. Logged here as the work stands. Target structure: 35 titles for men + 35 for women, each split 15 bestowed (power/office) + 15 flourish (reputation/status) + 5 spare. All non-hereditary, granted by the crown, revocable, ending at death.

Confirmed keepers (✓) across rounds:

- Bestowed: Lord Protector of [March/Province], Keeper of the Esan, Crown Envoy, Crown Merchant (Purveyor to the Throne), First Lady of the Bedchamber, Honored Companion of the Empress, Great Lady of the Court, Master of Rites, Grand Marshal, Lord Treasurer of the Crown, Lord Chamberlain of the Inner Court, Master of the Academy.
- Flourish: Lady of Flowers and the Arts, First of the Ansari, Lord of Verse, Lord of the Hunt, Lady of Virtue, Lady of Charity, Lady of Wisdom.

Working notes: flourish titles need not all be about the arts — simple virtue/character titles ("Lady of Virtue") are wanted; titles should range beyond court and arts (military, frontier, sea, trade, law, magic); under Matsiali women held the power offices freely, Pataoiut stripped them toward flourish titles.
